100 INJURED IN ANTI-FASCIST PITCHED BATTLE AT LORIENT HEAD-ON FRENCH TRAIN CRASH

Given a new opportunity to clear himself of the charge of playing traitor to his country, Corporal Ralph Osman, of Brooklyn, N.Y., successfully fought for freedom at Cristobal, Canal Zone. The United States Army court martial sentenced Osman to 20 years in prison after his conviction for attempting to sell military secrets. The sentence was set aside by President Roosevelt.

SPECULATIVE SILVER RISES TO BE CHECKED

U.S. Treasury Will Buy With Care.

100,000,000 OUNCES PURCHASED

London, To-day. Authoritative assurances have been given by the United States Treasury that for the present at least it will issue new silver certificates only to the amount equal to the purchase price of the silver which it acquires, declares the Washington correspondent of "The Times."

The fact that the Treasury does not intend to exercise its right to issue certificates to the amount equal to the statutory value of silver of U.S.$1.29 per ounce is regarded as another indication that the Administration is anxious to avoid any move liable to disturb public confidence in currency and so react unfavourably on the basic recovery programme.

BELIEVED PURCHASE
One hundred million ounces of silver is believed to have been purchased since the new policy was implemented, at a cost of U.S.$50,000,000 provided from the U.S.$200,000,000 stabilisation fund.

It is understood that these purchases will be continued until at least a further 1,000,000,000 ounces are acquired. The Treasury, however, will regulate them so as to avoid a possible rapid speculative rise in the silver price.

In the event of such a rise, the Treasury will probably counteract it by quitting the market until the price of silver is returned to more profitable levels.—Reuter.

MARSHAL CHIANG FOR HANGCHOW.

May Meet Huang Fu.

Shanghai, To-day. Marshal Chiang Kai-shek is leaving for Hangchow from Nanking to-day to inspect the Central Aviation Academy, and may meet Mr. Huang-fu.

Mr. Huang-fu left here for Hangchow this morning. Mr. Wang Ching-wei arrived at Nanking this morning.—Reuter.

NO DEATHS OCCUR
DRIVER AND FIREMAN STILL IN WRECKAGE
EXCURSION TRAIN INVOLVED.
40 REPORTED INJURED

Paris, To-day. Many holidaymakers were killed and many injured as the result of a head-on collision between an excursion train and a goods train, near La Garenne, 10 miles from the city.

The excursionists were returning home in a local train on the Paris-Dieppe line, after watching the illuminations and festivities in connection with the Longchamps Grand Prix.—Reuter.

Paris, later. Two passengers were killed and 30 injured in the collision, which happened at the entrance to Houilles station. The train left La Gare St. Lazare at 10.23 p.m. travelling on the lines of the State Railway.—Reuter.

NO DEATHS

Paris, later. It is now ascertained that no deaths occurred in the train collision, though the driver and fireman of the excursionist train are severely injured and are still pinned under the wreckage. Forty people were slightly injured.—Reuter.

GENERAL HO TO VISIT COLONY

Will Interview Mr. Hu Han-min.

POLITICAL VIEWS ON CANTON AND NANKING RELATIONS

(From Our Own Correspondent) Canton, To-day. General Ho Chien, head of the Hunan armies and provincial government, is to leave here this morning for Hong Kong to interview Mr. Hu Han-min, retired Kuomintang leader, in an effort to ascertain his political views on the current Nanking-Canton relations.

Mr. Hu Han-min has invited the Hunan general to Hong Kong in order to win his support for the three-cornered policy, namely the overthrow of the Nanking dictatorship, the suppression of the Communists, and the strong policy towards Japan. This stand is supported by all the Kuomintang veterans here.

AMERICAN SMELTING CO. WINS CASE

Washington, To-day. The Federal Trade Commission has dismissed the complaint against the American Smelting Company for violation of the Clayton Act on account of lack of jurisdiction.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

WOMAN BELIEVED DROWNED IN LAUNCH TRAGEDY

22 Passengers Rescued After Sinking Of Vessel Near Shanghai

Shanghai, To-day.

One woman is believed to have drowned when a motor-launch from Sunkiang, with 23 passengers aboard, was sunk at 8.30 a.m. yesterday near Minghong, near Shanghai.

The other passengers were rescued by crafts sent to the scene by a Chinese motor-boat concern.—Reuter.

HITLER ON NAZIS

1,000 Years For Movement

Counter Measures For Boycott

London, To-day. Declaring that the Nazi movement will last a thousand years, Chancellor Hitler, in an interview with the London "News Chronicle," warned those who are seeking the use of National Socialism for their own ends.

He said that the loyalty of his followers had not diminished, and that his hopes for the past year had been more than fulfilled.

He threatened counter measures to the foreign boycott of German goods, adding that, if necessary, Germany would ban imports and would substitute coal oil for petrol and artificial cotton for cotton.—Reuter.

ULL BEFORE THE STORM.

Business Drive Before U.S. Elections.

(SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL)
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894, Received June 25, 8.32 a.m.)

New York, To-day. Wall Street traders feel that business may be allowed to lag in the next month or so, after which a powerful drive would be made to get into action before the elections.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

Col Di Lana Refloated And Due In Colony on Wednesday

The Italian motor vessel, Col Di Lana, which went aground on the North side of Pratas Island last Wednesday night during a voyage from Tsingtao to Singapore, was refloated with the assistance of the tugboat Henry Keawick, at 5 o'clock this morning.

The vessel will leave for Hong Kong to-day and will probably go to the Kowloon Docks for a general survey.

Distress signals transmitted by the vessel after she went aground on Wednesday were picked up by the Kamo Maru which was on her way to Hong Kong from Manila. The Japanese vessel stood by the stranded ship until the Henry Keawick arrived this morning.

DAMASCOT ARRIVES AT NAGASAKI

Rough Trip For Capt. Jorgensen.

YACHT'S ENGINE GIVES TROUBLE

Shanghai, To-day.

The well-known Shanghai pilot, Captain S. P. Jorgensen, who early this month sailed from Shanghai to Nagasaki in 4½ days in the 27-foot yacht, Damascot, arrived here last night from Nagasaki after a rough passage lasting five days.

Captain Jorgensen stated that he was very tired and would have arrived earlier but the fates were against him and his companion, Mr. N. D. Jensen. They were calmed, and, to make matters worse, the auxiliary engine gave trouble.—Reuter.

The previous best time for a yacht from Shanghai to Nagasaki was six days, by the "Chelidon," (Capt. Jensen) in 1931.

The "Damascot" is a copy of the old type of Danish pilot boat, but is junk-rigged.

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR IN CRASH

Emerges Smiling From Plane Wreckage.

LANDS IN LENINGRAD SWAMP

Moscow, To-day.

An aeroplane carrying the United States Ambassador to Moscow, Mr. William C. Bullitt, to Leningrad to meet his 12-year-old daughter, Ann, crashed, owing to engine failure, when landing at Leningrad Aerodrome yesterday.

The plane overturned in a swamp, but Mr. Bullitt and his pilot, an American flyer named Lieutenant White, were unhurt. They crawled from the wreckage, grinning.

The plane was the Ambassador's personal machine in which he has made trips to various parts of Russia.—Reuter.

U.S. AIR SPEED ACE KILLED

Instruction Flight Tragedy.

New York, To-day.

Jimmy Weddel, the American aeroplane speed ace, was killed yesterday when the plane in which he was instructing a pupil, crashed here. The pupil was seriously injured.—Reuter.

WIDESPREAD RIOTS IN FRANCE

LOCAL JOCKEY LOSES CAR

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF M.G. SPORTS SECOND ATTEMPT SUCCESSFUL.

MR. PROULX VICTIMISED

An M.G. Midget Sports Roadster car, No. 2382, the property of Mr. B. A. Proulx, the well-known local jockey and manager of Paramount Films of China, Inc. was stolen from Kennedy Road, between 8 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Sunday.

An extensive search was made throughout the Colony and New Territories by the Traffic Department police officers, lasting the whole of yesterday, but no trace of the missing car has yet been found.

The possibility that the car has been shipped out of the Colony on a junk, or is being repainted in a garage, has been considered, and also that it has been wrecked over a cliff or driven into the harbour. A previous attempt was made on the same car last week, when a local locksmith was found in the car with his tools, endeavouring to start it up. He explained that he had been engaged by a Chinese to make a lock for the car.

Many are of the opinion that it is Fred Perry's year—he beat Crawford in the U.S. national, Australian, Victorian, and Bournemouth Finals.

2,000 FIGHT POLICE

CAFE CHAIRS AND BOTTLES AS WEAPONS CINEMA WRECKED BY MOB.

28 GENDARMES WOUNDED

Paris, To-day.

The increasing tension between the Fascists and the anti-Fascists was illustrated during the week-end, when riots occurred in various parts of France.

Over 100 people were injured at Lorient in a pitched battle. The mob, numbering over 2,000 charged the mounted police with poles, stones, bottles and cafe chairs. They seized the firemen's hoses, which were turned on them, and ripped them to pieces.

They wrecked a cinema where the Cinema-Feu ex-servicemen were spectators.

A prominent trades unionist was arrested while brandishing a sword which he had seized from a wounded Lieutenant of the Mobile Guards.

One policeman had an eye gouged out while 28 others were seriously injured.—Reuter.

WIMBLEDON STARTS TO-DAY

Perry's Opportunity This Year.

BRITAIN'S BRIGHT PROSPECTS

On Fred Perry and "Bunny" Austin ranked second and fourth among the "seeded" players. Britain's hopes of winning the singles crown at Wimbledon are centred. To-day the historic championships, which have attracted 118 men singles players and 86 women players, will commence.

Jack Crawford, who beat the whirlwind Ellsworth Vines in last year's Final, is not considered likely to retain his title, his defeat by Von Cramm in the French Championship Final having caused considerable anxiety in Australian circles.

Many are of the opinion that it is Fred Perry's year—he beat Crawford in the U.S. national, Australian, Victorian, and Bournemouth Finals.

RINGS RETURN TO FASHION.

Bizarre Trinkets The Vogue.

Paris. "Rings are coming back into fashion, with much emphasis on the stones and the lavishness of the settings."

Bizarre jewellery is affected for street wear, but for evening, elegance is the byword. Gold is extremely popular and all trinkets of the heirloom type are being featured as important to the Victorian trend in costumes.

Even the heavy brooches and bracelets of twisted gold, so long abandoned to their forgotten fate in the family jewel box, are playing a return engagement.

TIARAS TO BE WORN

ABSENCE OF PULL ON HATS.

Tailored Hats For Tailor-Modes.

London. There seems nowadays to be an absence of pull-on affairs in millinery models. The newer chic demands a careful fitting and poise.

Another point is that the hat has become so important as part of the great ensemble. Therefore it is certain that we do require a good amount of change.

After all, we cannot indulge in wide brims, flowers and feathers with tailored outfit. The so-called tailored hat is particularly smart this season, but much more complicated. That is, of course, once we have departed from rain-berets and the essentially sporting models.

CREAM ROUGES FOR DRY SKINS.

Give Velvet Appearance.

London. Dry skins need, in addition to nourishment and adequate protection from sun and wind, cosmetics which have no drying effects.

For example, cream rouges are considered better than powdered ones for dry complexions. New cream rouges have about the same consistency as whipped cream.

Worth has little square hats like mortar-boards. Some coat collars are of straw to match the hats. The Breton sailor hat is very becoming.

SPOTS IMPORTANT THIS SUMMER.

Brightening Dark Ensembles.

London. The spot has been given an important place this season in the wardrobe of the well-dressed woman.

Evening gowns, summer frocks and the accessories worn with dark suits for the streets all take the spotted way to smartness. Crepes and foulards with patterns in the various sizes in spots are leading favourites.

This is good news, for there are innumerable ways of brightening up dark ensembles with all sorts of contrasting spotted fabrics.

CHINESE COOLIE HAT.

Breton Sailors Becoming

Paris. Among the new season's hat shapes are the Chinese coolie, which may be given a turned-up brim, and the beehive, also with a brim like that of a child's sailor.

Worth has little square hats like mortar-boards. Some coat collars are of straw to match the hats. The Breton sailor hat is very becoming.

"Shorts Trousers" The Very Latest.

SANDPAPER FOR HANDBAGS

London. Novelty and still more novelty is the keynote to the latest fashions launched in London and Paris.

So many designers, all so very clever and full of imagination and that magical thing called "style," are attempting to become fashion "kings" that originality is desperately sought after.

Three years ago a dress parade always meant afternoon tea while the mannequins sauntered up and down a conventional strip of grey carpet.

Now a dress parade usually means cocktails while mannequins ride dummy horses to show off the latest riding-kit, play mock tennis, run races or jerk through the movements of the latest dance to a hot rhythm band.

This fierce competition has resulted in dozens of startling fashions.

Here are some noticed at the latest shows:

Bleached vulture plumage as a trimming for an ivory crepe-de-chine tea-gown.

"Shorts-Trousers"—a garment which looks like a pair of flannel trousers which have shrunk. They are wide in the leg but reach only half-way down the calf.

Sandpaper handbags. First came wood, then cork now coarse sandpaper—just like carpenters used to rub down woodwork—is being used to make the flap of pochette handbags.

Costumes, capes and turban hats made of ordinary Turkish towelling. Advocated as "perfect for the races."—Reuter.

LARGER MILLINERY SHAPES

Berets And Sports Felts Still Popular.

Millinery shapes get larger and flatter, at least, those of a youthful character, designed for wearing in the sun.

It seems a season of contrast regarding headgear, for despite these huge pancake flat-crowned hats, almost the size of a parasol, the craze for caps and various forms of berets and sports felts remains.

There must always be some sort of sports vogue to suit our life and the vagaries of the Hong Kong climate!

Even our most practical sports models show an amount of finest stichery. Both fabric and straws have drawn-work, hem and faggot-stitching, whilst eyelet-hole embroidery distinguishes the inexpensive linen range, providing pleasing ventilation for summer heat.

There is a definite shaping about even the simplest range of new and very small hats, also in the medium ones with stiffened brims.

"DOG COLLAR" STYLE REVIVED

Paris. Mature women have resurrected the dog collar of platinum or silver, with lavish sprinklings of precious stones.

Women of all ages are in a flutter about the hair ornaments, one of the most important items in present day jewellery styles.

BRIDGE NOTES

Choosing The Right Contract.

by Ely Culbertson

When a Bridge player is so fortunate as to pick up a hand containing all the Aces and a seven-card major suit headed by the Ace-King-Queen-Ten, he probably should not be greatly blamed for assuming that he has a fair play for all the tricks.

The basic assumption is sound, but even with this wealth of honours and playing-tricks there is no occasion for opening the bidding by undertaking a Grand Slam contract, which may be defeated through some of the quirks of distribution, or by undertaking a Small Slam contract, which may be inadequate but which, of course, partner can not be expected to raise.

Fortunately Contract players holding such hands as these have available a sure means of gaining some information as to distribution. This method is the Opening bid of two in a suit, which assures that partner will respond until a game contract is reached.

The hand below, which is an illustration of the tremendous advantage of exchanging information, occurred in a recent weekly competitive Duplicate Bridge game between the Melbourne and Chesterfield Bridge Clubs of St. Louis, Mo. It was submitted to me by Mr. S. J. Harbaugh with the request for me to give him my opinion of the correct Opening bid.

This I have already done in the opening paragraph, but the question of the correct final bid is so much more interesting that I give the hand below, together with the correct Rubber and Duplicate match-point Bridge bidding:

East, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

North:

S—8
H—7
D—Q 7 6 5 3
C—J 10 8 6 5 3

West:

S—Q J 10 7 6 5 2
H—5
D—J 9 2
C—9 2

East:

S—A K
H—A K Q 10 8 6 3
D—A K
C—A K

South:

S—9 4 3
H—J 9 4 2
D—10 8 4
C—Q 7 4

The correct bidding of this hand in a rubber game would be: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

4 H (3) 4 S (4)
4 NT (5) 5 S (6)

1-The conventional Opening Forcing bid of two in a suit.

2-The conventional response showing a hand containing one-plus honour-trick or less.

3-The Jump Trump Rebid showing a nearly solid trump suit with not more than one loser.

4-Naturally West, with a seven-card suit and a singleton, must show his distributional values in view of East's strong bidding.

5-This is not a sign-off but is the conventional Four-Five No-trump bid.

6-This is not a minimum response. If West's hand were no better than five spades to the Queen-Knave-Ten, he would respond with five hearts as a sign-off bid, even with the singleton in his hand.

7-This bid with the preceding bid by East shows all four Aces.

8-Obviously this is the best final contract from the standpoint of safety. While it involves the sacrifice of honours if played at notrump or if played at hearts, such minor consideration should have no sway in Contract Bridge.

At Duplicate play, with match-point scoring, the problem is much more difficult. In fact, I am inclined to believe that with correct bidding East and West would reach a contract of seven notrump, which, of course, is inevitably defeated.

Remarkably similar are these two pictures, although one was made in the front line trenches in France; the other, in Toledo, Ohio, during strike riots in which National Guardsmen battled against strikers with tear gas, bullets, and bayonets. Can you guess which is which?

AVUS GRAND PRIX MOTOR RACE.

Alfa Romeo Wins Major Event.

SPECIAL PRIZE GOES TO M.G. CAR

Berlin, May 27.

The International motor races on the Avus motor track, one of the most popular sporting events of the year in Berlin, were held this afternoon.

The main event, the race for cars over 1,500c.c. cylinder capacity, was won for Italy by Moil, driving an Alfa-Romeo. He covered the 15 laps, a total distance of 300 kilometres, at an average speed of 205 kilometres an hour.

Another Alfa-Romeo, driven by Varzi, was second, and a German car entered by the Auto Union and driven by Momburger was third. Lord Howe, driving a Maserati, was fourth.

There was a great crowd, which had come in hopes of seeing the race won either by one of the three Mercedes cars entered or by an Auto-Union car, and there was much disappointment when the loud speakers announced that the Mercedes would not run.

The cars of the Auto-Union (a federation of four formerly independent firms) showed a high speed, but could not stay the course.

Hans Stuck, on one of these cars, had to give up on account of mechanical trouble after leading the field for more than half the race at an average speed of 210 kilometres an hour.

The race for cars of less than 1,500 c.c. was won by last year's winner, Veyron, of France, driving a Bugatti, who covered the 200 kilometres at an average speed of 182 kilometres an hour. Lord Howe, the winner of 1932, was entered, but he did not start. The special prize offered in this race for cars of less than 800c.c. was won by an M.G. car driven by Brudes.

Wing-san (Sai Nam); 3. Chow Wing-san (Sai Nam); 4. Poo Chi-hang (Wah Yan).

Team Race—

1. Lingnam; 2. Wah Yan; 3. Pui Ching; 3. Sai Nam.

SPALDING
for Speed

The all-important factor in modern lawn tennis is speed and yet more speed. Other things being equal the man with that extra speed wins the match.

The new Spalding laminated multi-ply rackets are the fastest and most powerful ever produced. They can be strung to the highest possible tension without risk of warping thus giving tremendous pace to the ball as it leaves the racket.

The Spalding range of rackets for 1934 comprises twenty-four attractive models at prices to suit all purses.

LAWSON LITTLE'S RECORD GOLF VICTORY

WALLACE BEATEN
14 AND 13CHAMPION'S ROUND OF
66 IN FINAL

CROWD STAND AGHAST

(By George Greenwood)

ENGLAND WIN
GOLFScots Beaten At Sandwich.

London, Saturday.

England beat Scotland by 13 points to 5 in the twelfth annual Anglo-Scottish Professional Golf match over St. George's course, Sandwich, today.

England won four matches and halved the remaining two in the foursomes, and won 7 as against Scotland's 3 in the singles, two matches being halved.

The following were the teams:

Scotland—George Duncan (unattached), J. McCulloch (unattached), captain, J. M'Dowall (Turnberry), L. B. Aytoun (South Shields), T. Dobson (East Renfrew), J. Forrester (Cruden Bay), J. A. Adams (Royal Co. Down), Allan Dailey (Wanstead), Gordon Good (Romiley), W. Davies (Dumfries), J. McMillan (unattached), Tom Wilson (Littlehill), J. Ballantine (Yorkshire) or R. E. Ballantine (Moortown), S. Fairweather (Malone), W. Spark (Baltimore), and W. McMinn (Fairhaven).

England—Percy Alliss (Beaconsfield), S. F. Brews (South Africa), J. Busson (Parnell), T. H. Cotton (Belgium), D. Curtis (Bournemouth), W. H. Davier (Wallace), S. Eversbrook (Knowle), B. Gadd (Brand Hall), A. Havers (Sandy Lodge), B. Hodson (Chigwell), S. L. King (Knock Park), A. J. Lacey (Berkshire), Abe Mitchell (private), A. H. Padgham (Sundridge Park), A. Ferry (Leatherhead), W. Twiss (Langley Park), Charles Whitcombe (Crescent Hill), and Reginald Whitcombe (Parkstone).

Scotsman's behalf that he played the last ten holes of the match like a hero. For this stretch he was 3 under 4's, but this was paltry compared with Little's score.

He was 7 under 4's, and won 4 of the 10 holes. This, of course, was absolutely heart-breaking.

WHIRLWIND DISPLAY

As it is unnecessary to go into a detailed description of the match, I will content myself with stating briefly the salient features.

Actually, the combat was over almost before it began. Little, playing irresistible golf, won 5 of the first 6 holes. Though Wallace floundered about, it scarcely mattered what he did, for no man could compete successfully against this whirlwind display.

Six up at the turn having unexpectedly missed a putt of 5ft at the 7th to win the hole in 4, the American's next and last 5 was at the 12th, where a long iron shot drifted into a bunker at the corner of the green.

Wallace could not win the hole; indeed, he seemed devoutly thankful whenever a half came his way.

At the 14th the American hit a gorgeous drive, and then, with a high, pitching shot with a mashie-niblick, hit the pin and stopped a couple of feet away. Wallace got a 4, but that was no good.

LITTLE 12 UP

And so the silent procession, hoping against hope that something would turn up to stem the tide of misfortune, wended its way to the eighteenth. The American strolled off the green 12 up.

That there was to be no Crawley nonsense about this match was evident when the American resumed the attack.

Here are his figures to the 5th hole, where, mercifully, the slaughter came to an end: 2, 3, 4, 3, 3. Wallace played the holes in 4, 3, 4, 3, and yet lost two of them.

The vast crowd assembled on the slopes of the Himalayas broke loose and, dashing down the hillside, mobbed the new champion, the man who has set a new standard in golf.

First they cheered him, and then the unfortunate Wallace, who said, "I have no regrets; I have been beaten by a very fine golfer and a very fine fellow."

Fortunately for the two players a force of a dozen policemen escorted them back to the clubhouse over a mile away, otherwise heroworshipping might have gone to unpleasant lengths.

CYCLING CLUB

Pleasant Spin To Castle Peak.

MANY NEW RIDERS

The weekend run of the Hong Kong Cycling Club was perhaps the most pleasurable of any yet undertaken. Several new members took part in the spin to Castle Peak Bay, leaving the Yaumati Ferry at 9.15 a.m. No trouble of any kind was experienced, and the riders reached the Bay in beautiful bright sunshine a little before 11 a.m. After refreshments at the Castle Peak Cafeteria and a bathe the party proceeded onwards to near Un-Long, then retraced their tracks to the beach again, and it was not until 5 p.m. that the homeward trek was resumed.

Mr. C. Read (Captain) deserves congratulations for the apt manner in which he initiated the new riders, and for the comfortable pace on the return trip which brought the party to Shamshui Po a few minutes after 5.30 p.m.

Next week Mr. Read will again conduct the run to the same venue, probably by another route, and interested cyclists who have not yet attended a run, should seize this opportunity for their initial spin. Bathing costumes should be carried. The party will meet at the Hong Kong-Yaumati (Vehicle) Ferry, Kowloon, at 9 a.m.

No wonder that the Scotsmen's supporters who came from far and near to cheer their hero on to victory were so stupefied at the magnitude of the catastrophe that they were almost dumb.

It was all so different from the previous days when the crowd, mad with joy at Wallace's startling victories, shouted and cheered themselves hoarse.

There was now another side to the picture; the spectators stood aghast at the sight of their idol being trampled upon in so merciless a fashion.

Blow after blow descended upon the unfortunate player until he became dazed from the immensity of the attack.

In a few brief sentences I will try to explain the nature of the American's onslaught.

In the first place, he completed the first round in the wonderful score of 66, and went into luncheon twelve holes to the good. Could any man have desired a better aperitif to a meal?

A RECORD SCORE

In addition, Little had the satisfaction of knowing that he had a score three strokes better than Macdonald Smith's record of 69 made eight years ago.

China has already accepted the German Government's invitation to participate in the Games.

A meeting of the National Amateur Athletic Federation will be held in Shanghai next month to discuss the Olympic Games.

It will be recalled that in the 1932 Games, at Los Angeles, China had only one entrant, Liu Cheng-chub, the sprinter.

As if this were not enough,

Little went out in the afternoon, and, in a more belligerent mood than ever, polished off his victim at the Himalayas, having accomplished the five holes in sixteen shots, or one over 3's. Could anything be more incredibly crushing?

Though hating statistics, I must place on record the illuminating fact that this young American with the back and shoulders of a prize fighter, who went about the task of demolishing his opponent and the course at the same time, played the 23 holes of the match in 82 strokes, equivalent to ten under 4's.

DEEP WATER BAY FIT FOR GOLF.

Valley Course Closed.

A report has been received from the Royal Hong Kong Golf Club that the Happy Valley course will remain closed until Wednesday, at the earliest.

At Deep Water Bay, however, it is expected that at least six holes will be available for play this afternoon.

FRENCH NATIVE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP

Paris, May 22.

M. Carlhian won the French native amateur golf championship here to-day, beating the Comte Francois de Bagneux by 6 and 5 in the 36-holes final round.

WONDER ROUND

In this wonder round and a bit, there were twelve 3's, nine 4's and only two 5's.

Nothing that Bobby Jones has ever done, or is ever likely to do is comparable.

Naturally, the putting played a large part in this amazing achievement, and it is significant of the part the putter played, and also of the accuracy of the iron shots, that Little had one in the 36-holes final round.

LITERARY NOTES

EUROPE'S LARGEST ICE-CAP

Secrets Revealed In Explorer's Book.

TWO STRENUOUS MONTHS

"Iceland Adventure." By J. Angus Beckett. (Witherby. 8s. 6d.)

Vatnajokull, in the south-east of Iceland, is the largest ice-cap in Europe, consisting of about 3,400 square miles of perpetual ice and snow, almost devoid of life and very little explored.

In June, 1932, six young Cambridge scientists set out to investigate it. "Iceland Adventure" is the account of two strenuous months spent by the expedition, the average age of which was only 23. The group consisted of a geologist and zoologist, a surveyor — the author of the book — a botanist, an assistant geologist, an assistant surveyor and seismologist, and an ornithologist.

These good companions voyaged from Hull to the Icelandic coast in a trawler, used ponies to reach the ice, and thereafter proceeded on foot with their sledges and camping equipment. Progress was at first very slow, trying and monotonous in continual rain and fog.

But the high-spirited party made light of all their difficulties. They were soon rewarded by excellent scientific results being published separately from this volume (and by better weather).

The expedition made a double traverse of the ice-cap. But they were disappointed at the outset by the complete mechanical breakdown of the seismograph, by far the most expensive item in their equipment. It seems remarkable, by the way, that the total cost of the adventure was only a little over £300, about half of which was subscribed by the active participants.

SIMPLE LIFE ON AN ISLAND.

Tale Of Pastoral Peace.

There is a rare charm in this tale of the simple life on Skokholm Island, off the Pembrokeshire coast, and not for naturalists alone, although a large part of it is devoted to the sea birds and other wild denizens which the author has studied with such friendly interest. It is a tale of pastoral peace and independent, self-supporting labour.

"Producing most of our own food, living simply, with plain tastes in food and clothing, with nix at the cost of our own labour only, our expenses are few, and are covered by the receipts from a flock of one hundred ewes and the writer's rabbit crop."

These sheep are just a comfortable handful for one man who has regular assistance from his wife and occasional extra help from the keepers at the island lighthouse."

It is a delightfully told record of little, lovable things, through which one seems always to sense the fresh breezes of the sea.

ship," "Friendship," "Co-operation," "Language," "Strategy," "Orientation and Migration," "Vision," "The Mind of the Wild Craftsman."

Mr. Gordon very rightly drives in again and again the fact that we must not read or own minds into those of animals. It is a natural propensity, fortified by the fact that we are most of us brought up on stories in which animals talk; half the cruelty to animals in the world would not take place did men only realise that the poor beasts cannot understand our thoughts or wishes. When we see a beast or bird ministering to its young, and even risking its life for them, we tend to think in terms of human mother-love. But Nature arranges that the affection of animals for their young only lasts as long as is necessary in order to safeguard the species.

Excellent Way To See Life

Travels Of An Oxford Undergraduate

"A PSYCHIC PUB CRAWL"

(By HOWARD SPRING)

"The Provost of an Oxford college," says Mr. Philip Allingham, author of "Cheapjack" (Heinemann, 7s. 6d.), "pointed out to my father gently but very firmly that my chances of passing Responsions at any date were less than small."

So Mr. Allingham's career at Oxford came to an end, and, having tried this and that with indifferent success, he found himself at last, aged 21, sitting in an office in Coventry-street. He was not at all sure what he intended to do with his one-room office, "save that it gave me the feeling that I was there on the spot should anything ever arise for me to do."

And then, all of a sudden he saw what a fool he was, sitting there waiting for life to come to him. Why not go out, hold life up, so to speak, at the pistol's point, and demand what it seemed so reluctant to accord? He said to himself: "I have always been able to tell fortunes" and when the evening was come he put on full dress kit, without an overcoat, the month being June, and sallied forth.

He called himself a "clairvoyant and adviser," and began "a psychic pub-crawl." That is to say, he would go into a public house, have a drink or two to create a friendly atmosphere, and then, with the landlord's permission, tell the fortunes of the customers.

So he accumulated the funds to set up as a cheapjack at the fairs. A garden shelter cost thirty-five shillings. "I also purchased an incense-holder, some incense, and a number of Eastern truncheons wrapped in felt with truncheons made of rubber bound with cord, with bare fists, they streamed from all sides into the battle. It was a good fight, and the toughs were routed. "The truncheons which the gypsies carried were illegal, but, as a matter of fact, when I talked to one of the policemen afterwards he advised me to provide myself with one."

Length Travels.

A good deal had happened between the making of the pact with the Bosses and their effective intervention. Mr. Allingham had travelled all over England and North Wales, "working the tick-off" and later selling his hair-wavers. He had become a known and accepted member of

AN ESSAYIST OF CHARM

Character Studies And Pen Pictures.

SHIPS AND SHIPMEN

Set on the summit of a Scottish pass and marking the frontiers of the Highlands and Lowlands in a stone bearing the inscription, "Reat and be Thankful." In placing these words on his book of collected pieces Mr. Blake has done well, for they indicate the proper frame of mind in which this volume should be taken and read. An unique spirit can rob an essay of all its beauty.

Some of these pieces would more accurately be described as character studies and others as pen pictures, but they are all very readable whether they be about Glasgow or the people in it; the Firth of Clyde or the ships upon it. Mr. Blake writes charmingly of ships and shipmen, and his description of an ancient workman sitting on a hillside bench and watching the clipper he helped to build being towed home in its old age to be broken up is a delightful piece of work which bears the impress of the true artist.

There was Dalby Boswell, the gipsy fortune-teller, wearing tight-fitting scarlet boots, laced to the knees, and carrying an expensive fur coat in June. Her brown fingers were ablaze with diamonds. She told me sadly that she had once had so many rings that she could not shut her hand, but that times were bad now.

There was Little Major, bobbing up wherever anyone was in trouble, though "the slightest effort seemed too much for him when his own affairs were concerned."

There was Three-fingered Billy, the Dismal Jimmy of the fair-grounds, who was always "dead on the floor." "The game's not what it was. . . . I can remember the time when beer was three-pence a pint." He was "working the Budget;" and if you want to know what that means Mr. Allingham will tell you, fully and amusingly.

He blows the gaff on a great many ancient tricks and dodges; and there's no harm in that, for no one expects a "grafter" or "pitcher" to be a philanthropist. He dedicates his book "To my clients . . . affectionately," and well he may.

His clients — and so we may call his readers — will in turn feel some affection towards him for here he has provided good entertainment. He has explored an England that most of us have only glimpsed and brought back a joyous and exhilarating report.

Facts About The Animal Mind

Cruelty Caused By Confused Ideas.

NEW NATURE STUDY

"Wisdom in the Wild." By Douglas Gordon. (Murray. 7s. 6d.)

This is a Natural History Book of an unusual kind. It is not on the one hand, an academic treatise; nor is it, on the other, one of those enchanting works which rambles through the Curiosities of Animal Life and tells us about plants which eat insects and of fish which climb trees. It deals in generalities with the "animal mind" in a simple, colloquial manner.

There must be few who have not, at one time or another, taken part in discussions (always inconclusive) about "reason and instinct" in animals.

In the palmy days of St. Loe Strache's "Spectator", the correspondence columns of that earnest sheet were crowded with letters from old ladies and retired colonels about the preternatural intelligence of their pets; and any contemporary editor who should care to open his columns to discussions on such themes as "Do Dogs Think?" "Do Monkeys Talk?" and "How do Migrating Birds Find their Way?" would be immediately flooded out with multitudes of letters, contradictory theories and remarkable instances.

A Lifetime's Study.

Those are the kind of themes on which Mr. Gordon, who has spent a lifetime studying wild life, and writes with an ease which betokens a great amount of knowledge undisclosed and examples not brought into play, discourses in this volume. It is delightful reading, and will supply much ammunition to those who feel sure that, for the rest of their lives, they will periodically be forced to give their opinion over the coffee-cups.

One may be pardoned for giving a list of some of Mr. Gordon's chapter headings, as thus can the nature of his themes be best indicated: "The Wild Creature's attitude towards Mankind," "Affection," "Relation" (Continued at Foot of Col. 1). cheen.

Stark Facts About Security.

In the House of Commons recently Leading Ministers of the Crown stripped their speeches bare of all illusions, and dealt frankly with stark facts. If one single sentence stands out above all others, it is Mr. Baldwin's: "There is no such thing as a sanction that will work which does not mean war; if you are going to adopt sanctions you must be prepared for war." That will be extremely unpalatable doctrine to idealists who for years have been vainly trying to get round an awkward corner on a formula. It cannot be done. Moral sanctions, i.e., the reprobation of world opinion, are impotent to hold back a country which is being driven irresistibly forward by some powerful nationalist urge. Economic sanctions involve interference with the trade of neutrals, which if the trade is valuable will be hotly resented.

It is too often forgotten by those who think they see in economic sanctions an effective way of escape from military and naval sanctions how near President Wilson came to challenging the Allied blockade with a peremptory Note which the Allies could not possibly have accepted. With powerful American interests this counted for more than the Invasion of Belgium or the savagery of "sinking without trace." So long, therefore, as there is no agreement on the vital question of the "Freedom of the Seas" between the Naval Powers, those who adopt sanctions must be prepared for war. Mr. Baldwin did not, indeed, say that in no conceivable case should Britain be prepared to agree to sanctions. A really collective sanction, for example, would be a very different thing from one which left important nations outside. Sir John Simon stressed the point that disarmament could not be made effective unless America co-operated. Her official offers of co-operation have stopped far short of a promise to join in the collective action which alone would constitute an effective sanction.

The settled Air policy of the British Government was formally stated by Mr. Baldwin. It is that if there is no "limitation" of air armaments — and he obviously sees no chance of "reduction" — as an outcome of the Conference Britain shall build up her air strength to parity with that of the strongest Power within striking distance of her shores. At the same time he earnestly assured the House

TRESPASSING AT POLICE STATION.

Playing With Constable.

Four young Chinese, Chan Tim, Ng Mau, Lo Kin-uk and Lau Tai-sing, were charged before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Central Police Court this morning, for trespassing on Government property, within the grounds of No. 7, Police Station, yesterday.

Accused stated that they went there to play ball.

"They went thereto to play with an Indian constable, Your Worship," said Inspector Hourihan.

Chan was fined $2, while the others were bound over in the sum of $3 each.

Burial At Sea Theory Raised.

The badly decomposed body of a Chinese male was taken to the Kowloon Mortuary at 4.45 o'clock this morning. The body which was found on the foreshore at Pak Ho, Ping Shan District, was partly wrapped in a fishing net and weighted with a stone.

The theory of a burial at sea was advanced by Chief Detective Inspector Shannon.

Lourdes in Wales

Walsingham, to which the first pilgrimage for 400 years will be made this summer by English Roman Catholics, was a famous medieval shrine.

It never enjoyed as high a reputation for miraculous cures as the Holy well in the grounds of the Bishop's palace at Wells in Somerset, or St. Winifride's well in Flintshire.

These are the true British Lourdes.

St. Winifride's is still visited by the pilgrims every year.

The spring is believed to have risen on the spot where St. Winifride's head stopped rolling after it had been chopped off by a pagan Prince whose advances she had rejected.

Mr. Stephens And The Nazis

The British public is impatient to know the full details of the case of Pembroke Stephens.

What is known so far may be summarised thus:

Mr. Stephens, the Daily Express correspondent in Germany, heard reports of a big new factory at Aken for the manufacture of chemicals. He visits the spot and quite openly, makes inquiries. For this he is arrested and thrown into prison.

His captors realise that he has committed no offence, and he is let out.

Strange Coincidence

Then Mr. Stephens sends to his newspaper an article about the Jews. He writes of anti-Semitism in Nuremberg, where cafes display signs: "No Jews allowed here," in Berlin, in Baden, where 16 Jews have been arrested for keeping company with Christian girls, and elsewhere.

He reports the threat of Dr. Goebbels to keep Jews in Germany as hostages against the anti-German boycott by Jews in other lands.

No sooner is this article read in Germany than Pembroke Stephens is seized again.

REMOTE REPUBLIC OF REHOBOOTH

ROMANTIC HISTORY OF AFRICAN TERRITORY

GOLD FIELD POTENTIALITIES

(By Miriam S. Walsh.)

IN a remote part of Africa, in the scarcely known and romantic Republic of Rehoboth, a gold field of potentialities has been discovered.

This territory of Rehoboth is in the heart of South-West Africa, that great country captured from the Germans in 1915 by General Botha and his South African troops, and about which the late John X. Merriman, Premier of the Cape, made a remarkable prophecy as long ago as 1884. "What a wretched country and people they must be," he wrote, "and yet I make no doubt that some day it will be the mineral country of the world when all these Hottentot chieftains are forgotten."

And certainly South-West Africa has already contributed some most romantic chapters to the story of mining in the sub-Continent. It was along its stormy Atlantic beaches that early prospectors picked up diamonds by the handful mixed with sharks' teeth and strange, elongated oyster shells. There in the waterless desert, where no vegetation of any sort can live, have been developed the famous Pomona diamond fields.

From time to time gold has been unearthed in small deposits in the district of Rehoboth, right in the interior, but prospectors were not encouraged by the villagers—who liked seclusion—and no one paid much heed to the flowery tales of those who returned.

South Africa is full of treasure hunters!

But one of them, a German named Scholl, went back to Rehoboth a year ago and re-opened his old diggings and it is he who claims to have made amazing finds.

The gold rush to this new field has turned attention to the people who live there, whose history is one of the most interesting in all our Empire. These hybrids, or Bastards as they have always been called, have won for themselves a remarkable place in the annals of the Empire for valour, endurance and enterprise.

Their story goes back through more than two centuries. It began somewhere about the year 1700 with the trekking of a group of Boers, some of whom had married native women, from old Cape Colony.

No one knows exactly how many there were, but they set out on their journey into the unknown simply because they wished to be free of any Government, any taxation, any restrictions.

With their women and children and wagons and few poor possessions they went northwards and westwards into the wilderness.

They came at length to the mighty Orange River, and there for many years they wandered, gradually spreading out along 600 miles of its frontage, until at the beginning of the nineteenth century they numbered over 3,000.

The Northern Advance

Early in the nineteenth century a great number of the Bastards, alarmed by the oncoming of civilization, determined to move off once more; they crossed the Orange River, and advanced northwards. Undeterred by thirst, drought or flood, surviving the ferocity of the native Hereros and the poisoned arrows of the little yellow Bushmen, making friends with the wily Hottentot, whose young girls many of them married, they grew in numbers as they advanced.

They became skilled hunters and trappers, and learnt the lore of the Bushmen, those primitive people, relics of the Stone Age. Snakebite held no terrors for them, the desert itself gave up its secrets in return for their mastery of the strange clicking tongue of the pigmy people — a language more like the creaking and rustling of dry bones upon a gibbet than the speech of humans.

They crossed the new famous salt-pans, vast basins of pure glistening white salt that blinded them as they stumbled on.

They gathered sacks of the precious stuff and exchanged it for cattle or Hottentot wives.

The case was brought to the attention of the police by Mr. Westlake, of the Supreme Court, while accused was coming over on a ferry from Taipo.

Mr. Hamilton pointed out the danger of rabies which is now prevalent in the Colony, especially in Kowloon.

BUNNY

sing—it was considered polite at the pension to ask people to sing, and, unfortunately, not very many of them refused—she declared that she had a voice like a basket of kittens—and made similar manly jokes at her own expense. They suited her rather grim face. The shock came when she told us about the American.

We all of us knew that she had travelled. America, Asia, Africa were only items in her itineraries.

She knew a lot about them and talked well, and then, when she had proved herself little short of a Livingstone or a Stanley, she would tell us—one at a time—that she was probably going to be married directly. There was someone—the American—who was coming from somewhere—where he had been three years—and then she would have to make a decision. He had said she didn't know her own mind. He said that three years ago—just before she went to the East India. He was coming back for her answer.

She didn't know what she was going to do about it. She had told him she would have to see him first.

You had the impression that he was covering thousands and thousands of miles, going round the world perhaps as many times as possible in order to come from a great distance so that he could turn up in Paris at about Easter time in order to ask Miss Wordsley a question.

We wondered whether Miss Wordsley could possibly have looked much younger three years ago—a little less like Beethoven. We hoped he was a millionaire—the American, not Beethoven. And we waited and we heard more conversation about Florence and hot-water bottles and tea-baskets and porters, and we bought hats, and the young clerk continued to talk about night-life—chiefly when Miss Wordsley wasn't there.

She never talked tea or even

Paris. If you mentioned excavations in Crete she would say, "You know there are some very curious parallels in North Africa," or

"When I was in Jerusalem." She told you about the bells on the temples in Burma which corroborated all we had ever learnt in Colonial exhibitions. "Mesopotamia?" Did you say Mesopotamia? Miss Wordsley's large, slow voice was directed one evening towards a newcomer—a man with rather eager eyes who had brought his wife to see the battlefields, though she only wanted to go shopping in Paris.

"I was out there under Townshend." The man began to tell the history of Mesopotamia.

"He left fifty thousand pounds," said an elderly man who had brought his daughter to see "gay Paree." "A tidy sum. Have a pear Alice."

"I don't want to denude you of it, father." Alice was a shade genteel:

"Well, if you don't want it." He took the last pear.

"When I was in Mesopotamia," said Miss Wordsley, "feeling was running very high."

"Yes, we've made a pretty mess of it."

"I wanted to understand the native point of view," she continued. "I tried to learn Arabic. Yes, it is difficult."

Miss Wordsley was certainly a power in the pension, even to newcomers. And you couldn't be jealous of her with face like that. At least, that was Miss Eagle's point of view. You couldn't think her prepossessing. The Mesopotamian didn't as she listened to all his experiences. His wife had to touch him to indicate that everybody had left the table. Oh, those stories!

His wife knew them all by heart. And he always told them in the same words—she could have screamed sometimes—and with the same pauses, and even with the same gestures. How far were the shops from the pension? she asked Miss Wordsley. She had seen to it that they would have one day left from the battlefields.

Still Mr. Smith never spoke a word, but went on calling his dinners solemnly and punctually and—it was alleged—combining Paris with the Crystal Palace or Streatham. Miss Wordsley said she was not at all sure about Paris.

A good many people left the pension at Easter. Some had finished their term and passed their examination. Some had economised all the winter and were going to spend the summer elsewhere. The transients continued to improve their minds with concentrated doses of a week in Paris, and how was it the French couldn't wash flannels?

English, Scottish, Welsh, American, the majority of them scattered, except the little clerk and one or two other exiles who kept up their spirits by writing home about the dashing life they led in Paris. In the general exodus Mr. Smith disappeared without a trace, and even Miss Wordsley was lost sight of in default of permanent chroniclers at the pension.

That was probably how the rumour arose. Three months after Easter some of the older inhabitants began to repeat themselves. One and all they wanted to know about the "American." Had he come? What had happened? Had Miss Wordsley been able to make up her mind to live in America?

"Rumour grew strong. Ridiculous stories went the round. Somebody went so far as to say that Miss Wordsley had eloped with Mr. Smith! 'Well, why not?' An intelligent woman and Mr. Smith a painter, who could probably tell her all about the pictures she didn't know.

A self-explanatory map showing the scene of the kidnapping and recovery of William F. Gittle (left) California oil millionaire; and June Robles, 6-year-old Tucson, Ariz., girl (right). Three men arrested in the raid that freed Gittle without payment of ransom were reported by the police to have confessed. It was also reported that a $10,000 ransom was paid for the Robles child, who was found chained in the desert and suffering from exposure and malnutrition. Her family said no ransom had been paid.

RADIUM "MIRACLE" CURE

100-1 Chance Operation Successful.

GIRL'S LIFE SAVED

Cardiff. A 13-year-old girl stricken with blindness and with only 6 months to live has had her life saved and her sight restored by a 100-1 chance operation.

Some weeks ago Nancy Jones, of Caerphilly (Wales), was struck in the eye by a ball. Cancer developed and she gradually lost her sight.

Eye specialists examined her and finally Dr. Leighton Davies and Dr. Mervyn Thomas of Cardiff Royal Infirmary decided to remove the cancer growth by a radium needle operation. There was just a hundred-to-one chance of success for it was thought that cataracts would follow the operation.

There was just a hundred-to-one chance of success for it was thought that cataracts would follow the operation and that although the girl's life might be saved her sight would never return.

The doctors took the risk. Five radium needles were inserted in the growth and later a piece of radium backed with rubber was placed on the eye. Within 17 days the girl's sight had returned and now she is completely cured. — Reuter.

GENEROUS TO THE LAST.

Wealthy Landowner Gives Away All.

Belgrade. Mr. X. was a wealthy landowner at Jajica, Bosnia.

His friends were always asking him to back their bills.

Mr. X. never refused.

But one by one his friends defaulted.

At last all his estates were gone. He had nothing but a bundle of his friends' bills which he had redeemed.

Mr. X. sold his bundle of redeemed bills as waste paper for 1s. 4d.—all the money he had in the world.

And he used it to buy a round of drinks in the local inn! — Reuter.

Then everybody laughed. For Mr. Smith had never been known to speak. Also, Miss Wordsley was palpably of a different social status from Mr. Smith. Think of all the people she had met on her travels! One thing must have happened, however. Either the American had been refused by Miss Wordsley, or she had made up her mind to go to America with him. Of course, she had already been there.

The young clerk—he wasn't very reliable—was making his way down to dinner one night in August. He lived on the sixth floor. Half-way down he met Miss Wordsley coming up.

"I don't know. After so much moving about."

"That's true. But how did he ever propose? I've never heard him speak."

Miss Wordsley smiled wisely. She looked tired now. It seemed she had been ill in Madrid. Bunny had been very good to her. That was what tested a man—when you looked a bag and couldn't do things. "He was horribly alarmed about me," she told Mrs. Agnew complacently.

"What I admire about Miss Wordsley," said Mrs. Agnew, "is that she knows what she wants and she takes it. Of course, she might have made a better match than Mr. Smith, but no. She turns down the other man and takes on this little grasshopper, just because she loves him. It's real romance," and Mrs. Agnew gulped with emotion.

All the pension felt that Miss Wordsley might have looked a good deal higher than Mr. Smith. For, of course, Mr. Smith did sometimes speak, and his accent was not at all like that of Miss Wordsley. It was not difficult to picture his sisters either. You could see them living their straight little lives in a straight little suburb. You could see the house with the privet hedge, cut so that not one leaf was out of place. You could see the flowers in the vases—the exact dozen—bought on Saturday from a woman at the corner who said they were fresh that morning. You could see the church—or was it chapel?—and the two sisters arriving punctually at eleven, while the third remained at home to cook the Sunday joint, with a cold sweet. You could see Mr. Smith, no longer humble and voiceless, but a power among three women who adored him and even while they wished that he went to London every day by the 8.30, admired him because he insisted upon Art with a big A.

You could hear them talk of "my brother who is studying art in Paris." They showed the zig-zag cushions which he had designed in the intervals of his art work. They had filet net curtains, even though they preferred lace, and though the little house was built in a period that demanded lace and not net. Two of them followed art lectures in order to keep up with him, and it was a pity that the third had to stay at home in order to look after the house. When he went to Paris they realized that art will have its sacrifices. Paris had its temptations, but they trusted their brother.

The pension could very well picture Mr. Smith's home-life, because it was very much the kind of life he led himself when not in Paris. It could not conceive Miss Wordsley's life, and for that very reason felt it was something beyond them.

"I'm so much interested in the Moorish influence in Spain. You brought your drawings, didn't you, Bunny?"

Miss Wordsley was not wholly masculine in her outlook. She confided in time to all the pension—very calmly and collectedly. It was true, while Bunny sat listening happily at the other end of the sofa, that they were to be married in three weeks' time. Yes, at the

With Dorothy Round, last year's finalist, and Margaret Scriven among the seeded eight women players, Britain's chances are considered bright, although a great improvement on the display in the Wightman Cup will be necessary.

The Americans are very strongly represented by Helen Jacobs and Sarah Palfrey, while Frau Sperling (Fraulein Krahwinkel) of Germany is an opponent who might well prove to be a stumbling block to British hopes.

The Australians have sent a strong women's contingent, although none of them are included in the seeded eight. Miss Joan Hartigan is the Australian champion, while Mrs. H. B. Molesworth is ranked second in Australia.

Another report states that the vessel will be towed to Hong Kong by the Henry Keawick.

SUSPENSION OF PAYMENTS IN CANTON

Fear That Stabilised Banknotes Will Drop.

BUSINESS NOW EXPECTED TO IMPROVE

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, To-day. For fear that the stabilised banknotes may drop again, the Provincial Department of Finance has extended the suspension of all payments from June 11 to June 27. Originally the period was to have ended on June 21.

Provincial notes of one-dollar and five-dollar denominations are accepted on full values. The only provincial notes that remain unredeemable are those of ten-dollar denomination, which are said to be redeemed in full by the Kwangtung Provincial Bank on July 1.

Notes of the Canton Municipal Bank are also recovering, and have almost reached 90 cents per dollar.

The acute business depression here is due largely to the depreciation of the provincial and municipal notes. In commercial circles here, it is felt that business will turn the corner, now that the government paper money has re-erected the confidence of the general public.

Depreciation of the government notes began on November 15, 1933 when the People's Revolutionary Government was formed at Foochow. Nanking propaganda charged that it was a Communist regime, and the publicity bureaus here erroneously confirmed it. Hence there was a financial panic here which decreased the value of the government notes.

DEATH BEFORE DISHONOUR.

Nine Amoy Girls In Mass Suicide.

A poignant tragedy, involving the lives of nine young girls, was revealed in Amoy last week, when the bodies of the girls, tied by a rope, were discovered in the water outside the North Wai On Gate.

It was reported that the question of marriage was given as the reason for the act.

Col Di Lan Refloated And Due In Colony On Wednesday

This is the third vessel which has gone aground on Pratas Shoals this year, the other two vessels being the Soviet, Kuznetzessk, and the Japanese, Komi Maru.

It was later learned that the Col Di Lan will leave Pratas Island early to-morrow morning for Hong Kong under the escort of the Henry Keawick, and is expected to arrive here on Wednesday forenoon.

Another report states that the vessel will be towed to Hong Kong by the Henry Keawick.

According to Mr. Chu Chang-nin, Chinese Minister to Norway, Sweden and Finland, who is now in Shanghai, there are 80 Chinese in Norway, 50 in Sweden and about 10 in Finland.

CHEUNG CHAU READY FOR SUMMER

Cement Paths Improve Island.

RAINS CAUSE LANDSLIDE

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Cheung Chau, Yesterday. The houses on the Island are beginning to open up for the summer.

The owner of No. 12a has returned from his six month's vacation, spent in New Zealand, Australia and Tasmania. He made the journey back to Hong Kong via Perth, Java and Singapore.

The building of the new hospital is proceeding well, the concrete roof now being finished. Progress is also being made on the new bungalow on the site of Dr. Meadows' old house, and a tennis court is being made at the upper end of the ball ground.

An extensive landslide occurred at No. 2a, following last week's heavy rains. The foundations of the house, however, have not been effected.

A new verandah has been erected at No. 16, the house which changed hands last year, and improvements have been made to No. 22. Cement paths have been laid down in several places.

GENERAL HO TO VISIT COLONY

TO DISCOVER ATTITUDE

The primary object of General Ho Chien's visit to Canton is to find out the real attitude of the military and civilian leaders here. The Canton military authorities are of the opinion that as long as Kwangtung is left to itself, friendly relations with Nanking should be continued. Assurances that Nanking has no ulterior motive vis-a-vis Kwangtung are made by General Chiang Pei-cheng, liaison officer of the Military Affairs Commission.

MERCHANTS in Canton are hoping that there will be no further political rift in the country that will upset trade. Any political disturbance would have a further setback to trade. In the event of serious developments the taxes will be increased still higher.

Important meetings are held daily among the military men and Kuomintang veterans within closely guarded doors.
